WINDING UP ASHOKAN CLAIMS

Attorneys Disagree as to Whether One Commission Can do the Work and Judge Hasbrouck Has Reserved His Decision.

Application for the appointment of one commission to succeed Ashokan Business Damage Commission No. 1, whose term has expired; Business Damage Commission No. 2, whose term expires soon and Business Damage Commission No. 3, whose term as a business damage commission will expire in October was made to Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday.

William McE. Speer appeared for the Board of Water Supply of the City of New York and in favor of the application, to which there was no objection, and the principal matters discussed by counsel who represented various claimants was whether one commission would be sufficient to handle the amount of business to be tried and in regard to what powers and jurisdiction the commission should possess.

Arthur A. Brown, of Brown & Slosson, said he did not consider that the work could be handled by one commission, but that two or more commissions would be required to handle it.

Judge Van Etten appeared for the Board of Water Supply and other claimants whose claims are now pending on trial before Commission No. 3. He filed an affidavit denying certain allegations in the City's petition for the appointment of a commission, particularly in regard to the allegation that the existing commission had been dissolved.

Judge Van Etten said the existing commissions had no general jurisdiction except on the claims on which they had been appointed, and that other claims required that the consent of the claimant and the City be given before the claims could be tried.

He never had been able to obtain the consent of the City except in cases where an amount had been agreed on. From the petition and notice of the City, he said, it was evident that the City intended to take advantage of the short statute of limitations created by the Water Supply Act and to claim that a trial court had been in continuous existence while in fact he had been unable to get the City's consent except in cases that were to be settled.

On account of the DuPont claim and other claims now pending before Commission No. 2, Judge Van Etten said that the commission he had been appointed to handle was not to be dissolved.

Ex-Mayor William D. Brinnier said he represented a number of property owners along the Esopus creek who had sustained damages and also claimants who had sustained land damages. He did not think the commission could dispose of all the cases, even if it sat every day.

Every man living along the Esopus creek from the Ashokan dam to Saugerties had a claim for damages and there were large damages at Saugerties. He said he thought there ought to be two or three commissions so that cases might be tried and disposed of readily, and that the court should provide a tribunal of sufficient size to dispose of all the cases without keeping any one waiting.

Morschauer & Mack of Poughkeepsie appeared for James H. Sands, owner of the falls and other property at Glenrie. The firm had applied for a mandamus requiring the City of New York to apply for the appointment of commissioners, and the matter had been adjourned from the last special term to the present special term. That firm had no objection to the appointment of a commission but believed that the order should recite specifically that the commission should have jurisdiction to hear and determine the claim of Mr. Sands.

Jan claims, the city already had urged that there was no evidence that the water of the Esopus creek had been diverted. There never had been a commission with plenary power but attorneys had been at the mercy of the city in getting its consent to the trial of claims.

Claimants could not go into court and sue the city as in other matters, said Judge Clearwater. That question had been determined in the case of Stella Flood, who was the owner of property outside the reservoir taking-line. She had sued the city for trespass because its engineers had entered her lands, had drilled holes, removed timber and caused other damages. The case had been tried before Judge Rudd at the court house in this city and the city had demurred to the complaint on the ground that the case was triable before a commission.

The matter had been gone into most thoroughly; the city had pleaded that it had afforded a tribunal in the way of business damage commissions, and that the Water Supply Act and its amendments provided the only remedy for recovery of damages for injuries.

Judge Clearwater said he had thought this an astounding proposition but Judge Rudd had held that the city's point was well taken, and if Judge Rudd's decision is sound, claimants could not go into court but must take their proceedings under these statutes, and he was not sure but what the city was right. At any rate, he had decided not to appeal the case.

Judge Hasbrouck said he would like to hear counsel on several propositions of law. Were the damages incident to the diversion of riparian rights like the damages for which provision had been made in the statute? Some of the damages which the city pays under this statute are not known to the common law, like damages to property not taken, or business damages; was the taking of water from a stream another matter entirely, or not? No matter what the city claimed, if he thought claimants had a right to sue, he would hold if the case was presented to him, and if it was made clear that claims must be tried before a commission, he would decide that way.

Judge Clearwater said that whatever the city might claim hereafter, it had contended all along that all claims must be tried according to the provisions of this act. Whether that contention was correct was a matter for the court to determine and to determine the limits of a commission's power in the order of appointment. He believed the court should determine the state of the law and the commission should not have jurisdiction.

Judge Hasbrouck asked whether counsel considered it lawful for the court to appoint commissioners where riparian rights were taken but the owners of such rights were not named, and on claims for riparian rights taken by the city, when interest begins to run, if interest does run; what was the difference between taking land and taking a stream, under these acts?

Judge Clearwater said that personally, because of the large interests he represented, he would prefer to preserve riparian claims under the common law. An owner did not own the stream, but only the right to the reasonable use of the water. When the Ashokan reservoir was filled, the valley of the Esopus would be an arid gravelly region, but the city contends that it does not take the land and therefore should not pay interest on the awards because interest is provided for in the Water Supply Act only where the land is taken. On behalf of himself and his fellow members of the bar, he should like to know with what powers these commissions, or this commission if there was to be only one, would be clothed. All counsel, he said, objected most strongly to including in the order of appointment any such language as, that used in the notices posted throughout the county, to the effect that the notice was not to be considered an admission of any claim, or that the city was stopped from contending that proceedings already had been a bar to any claim. He was not inclined to be meticulous, but he would like to have the court consider this matter most carefully.

Judge Hasbrouck said he would try to see that the order did not contain anybody's rights.

Judge Van Etten said that on an appeal to the appellate division in one of his cases, that court had overruled his contention that the city must describe the property, so he took it as a matter of law that in the present proceeding, involving riparian rights, it was not necessary to describe the property. In the DuPont Powder Company's case, on the first trial, it was claimed by the city that the water of the Esopus creek had not been taken by it, and now he was confronted with the contention that the city was too late in presenting its claim, and he was trying in the present proceeding to guard against a repetition of such action through implication of the language of the order.

Howard Chipp said he had believed that an owner who had a claim for damages against the city should have his remedy either under the common law or under the legislative enactment of the water supply act, or that an owner could seek his remedy under the common law concurrently with the remedy devised by the legislature, and he still believed that to be the law of these cases. Where property was taken, unquestionably there must be a description of the premises acquired, but where no property actually was taken, he did not believe that any description was necessary, and the owner was entitled to seek a common law remedy. The riparian owner has the right only to the use of the water appurtenant to his property, and therefore his claim should be the same as for the value of the real estate not taken, but the owner was not confined to the statutory remedy prescribed in the water supply act and its amendments.

Ex-Mayor Brinnier said he would suggest that the order as to riparian rights be made very broad. Ever since the impounding of water began, there were frequent occasions when the Esopus was practically dry, and then the city would let out some water from the reservoir and into the bed of the stream, so as to make it appear that the stream would not be dry.

Mr. Speer said that the city opened the water gates periodically and allowed water to flow into the stream. The city, he said, asked that the court appoint one commission which should be a court that would give all its time and energies to this work. The claims which were being approached are larger and more serious than any of those which have arisen within the reservoir section, especially the Saugerties water power claims and the number of indirect claims was now going above one thousand. His object in drawing the papers used on the present application was to enable the court to appoint a commission with exclusive powers. Commission No. 1 had run out, the term of Commission No. 2 would expire after next month, and the term of Commission No. 3 would expire in a few months. Instead of there being three commissions holding sessions of one week a month and being compelled to adjourn the end of their week from lack of business, there should be only one commission which should prepare a calendar and be in practically continuous session; there should be a tribunal in continuous session ready at all times to hear and determine the claims of claimants as they came in without being compelled to adjourn for lack of business. On behalf of the city he had never yet asked any adjournment of any case before a commission. As to the remedy which might be sought by an owner, the trial term and the special term had held that the water supply act afforded the exclusive remedy, and that had been the decision also of the appellate division in three or four cases which had been submitted to Judge Rudd at the time the Stella Flood case was tried.

Judge Clearwater said the court of appeals had not yet passed on that question, but he believed with Mr. Chipp, that the remedies should be concurrent, both under the common law and the statute. A commission with plenary powers would be entirely satisfactory to his own unfortunate clients.

"There is a suspicion," said Judge Hasbrouck, "that the clients whom you represent are not unfortunate, but are fortunate."

Judge Clearwater said there was one other thing to which he desired to call attention, and that was that the commissioners should be selected in the court house instead of the office of the corporation counsel, which was unseemly.

"They moved over here but they all came back," said Mr. Speer.

Judge Clearwater said that not only should the commissioners be selected in the court house, but justice be above criticism and suspicion but above the appearance of suspicion. The members of the bar fully realized the fact that it made no difference whatever to the commissions in their decisions whether the sessions were held in one place or another, but this impression, if differently to the lay mind, especially to those whose expectations had not been realized or who had been disappointed. Besides, the court house was the place provided for by the people of the county to hold their courts, and they wanted to see their courts sit in the court house. What was needed most of all was a commission in continuous session; not a commission spending three days on one thing and the balance of the week on other things.

Judge Sharpe said that while the motion pending before the court was for the appointment of only one commission, if the order did not include any statement to the effect that this should be the only commission, the sessions would be held in one place or another, but this impression, if differently to the lay mind, especially to those whose expectations had not been realized or who had been disappointed. Besides, the court house was the place provided for by the people of the county to hold their courts, and they wanted to see their courts sit in the court house. What was needed most of all was a commission in continuous session; not a commission spending three days on one thing and the balance of the week on other things.

Mr. Speer said the motion was for the appointment of one commission, and it was a waste of time and money to have so many commissions who did not have work to keep them busy all the time. These were important questions to the city, which had been compelled to cut out needed improvements and needed work within the city because of its expenses. What was needed in his opinion, more than anything else was a commission composed of men who would stay on the job continuously like His Honor, Judge Hasbrouck, or like Judge Jenkins.

Ex-Mayor Brinnier, Judge Van Etten and Mr. Brown reiterated their statements that they did not believe the work of disposing of over a thousand claims could be performed by one commission.

Judge Hasbrouck reserved decision.

"Uncle Nick" in California.

The Pasadena, California, Star says: Eighty-eight years of age is Nicholas Hallock of Milton, but he was one of the spryest of the many delighted visitors at the flower show yesterday. Mr. Hallock is a horticulturist of some renown back home and for six years was a member of the board of control of the New York experimental station, an office to which he was appointed by Roosevelt. He had judged big shows back east and only this week received notification that he had been appointed to judge fruit at the Queens-Nassau fair. For a man who is verging on ninety this is no mean feat. He is much impressed with the spring flower show.

GENERAL IAN HAMILTON AND GENERAL FRENCH

General Hamilton served in Egypt and in India with Lord Kitchener.

HORSE THIEF BACK IN JAIL

Edward Tompkins, the horse thief of Putnam, who escaped from the county jail, was captured on Saturday afternoon near Elting's Corners and was brought to the county jail by Jailor Seth Jocelyn. Tompkins at the last term of county court pleaded guilty to stealing a horse and was sentenced to three months in the county jail. Owing to good behavior he was made a trusty. The day he escaped from the jail he was last seen at supper and after that he walked out of the court house. His escape was discovered when it became time to lock up for the night and a general alarm was sent out by Sheriff Shultis.

Since the escape of Tompkins, Sheriff Shultis and Under Sheriff Hornbeck have been working day and night in an effort to round him up. It was finally learned that Tompkins was hiding in the mountain district back of Elting's Corners and that his friends and relatives were taking food into him during the night. Owing to the dense growth of trees and brush it was impossible to locate Tompkins who had found a secure hiding place. Finally the sheriff decided that the best plan to locate him would be to have men on the watch for him and a number of men in the vicinity of Tompkins' hiding place were instructed when they seen him to notify the sheriff's office.

Saturday about noon Tompkins was seen by one of the men who invited him down to his house. Tompkins was unsuspecting and went along and the man managed to get into telephone communication with the sheriff's office and Mr. Jocelyn hurried to the scene and placed Tompkins under arrest.

Tompkins is an old offender and is about 24 years of age.

SEVERE STORM SWEEPS MISSOURI

By Telegraph to The Freeman. St. Louis, May 3.—Reports filtering in over partially restored lines of communication today told of the worst storm in a generation that swept Missouri yesterday. One death was reported, that of Leo Hanley, 18, who was struck by lightning at Sturgeon, Mo.

Reports from several places stated that hail-stones as large as baseballs fell during the storm. In this city many streets were flooded. More than a score of persons attending fashionable churches on King's Highway were taken from the church doors to street cars in canoes.

The benefit to the crops, it was believed, would more than offset the damage done by the hail and rain.

75,000 BROOK TROUT IN ULSTER STREAMS

On Saturday 75,000 brook trout were received by Carl Preston, secretary of the Ulster County Fish and Game Protective Association, and were liberated at Traver Hollow, Molby Hollow, Watson Hollow, Snyder Hollow, in streams near Lanesville, in streams near Hunter, and in the Beaverkill. Another shipment is expected next week which will be liberated in the streams west of Phoenicia. The trout received were from the government hatchery at Cape Vincent, Thousand Islands. Earlier in the week 25,000 trout were also received from the government hatchery and placed in the streams near Ellenville and Kerhonkson.

The association has placed an order for twenty-five pairs of pheasants, which when received will be liberated in the county.

The organization is planning an active work this summer and would be glad to have any one interested in the preservation of the fish and game of the county to affiliate with the association. The annual fees are but $2 a year. Anyone desiring to become a member of the organization may communicate with the secretary, Carl Preston, at The Huntington, on Pearl street.

NORTH SEA BATTLE AGAIN EXPECTED

By Telegraph to The Freeman. London, May 3.—An important naval battle in the North Sea is expected as a result of the admiralty's announcement of several small fights off the Belgian coast in which the British torpedo boat destroyer Recruit and the British trawler Colombia and two German torpedo boats were sunk. The German mosquito fleet, which was engaged near North Hinder Light-ship, was believed to be the advance guard of a strong German fleet.

The Columbia was acting as a tender to warships and mine sweepers. There were no British casualties. Two German officers and forty-four men were rescued from the sea and made prisoners. It is believed that the German squadron suffered loss of life.

ITALIAN ARRESTED FOR QUICK MURDER

Silvestro Di Silvestre, an Italian, was arrested on Saturday afternoon by the board of water supply police and arraigned before Judge Buswell at Brown's Station charged with murder in the first degree in shooting Arthur Quick of Atwood, whose body was found last Wednesday afternoon shortly after 3 o'clock. Judge Buswell held the Italian for a further hearing on May 10, and he was brought to the county jail by Sheriff Shultis and Under Sheriff Hornbeck. It is expected that the case will also be submitted to the grand jury which held its first session this afternoon at the court house. The Italian has retained Brinnier & Canfield as his attorneys. When Quick's body was first found it was thought that he had committed suicide, as he lay on his back with a revolver in his right hand. Later investigation by the board of water supply police and the district attorney's office led to the belief that Quick had been murdered and suspicion pointed to Silvestre.

Saturday Coroner H. Lee Breithaupt of Phoenicia held an inquest at the police barracks at Brown's Station and eight witnesses were examined. The most important point brought out was that Quick had last been seen about seven o'clock on Tuesday evening by Stephen Hush, who lives near the Quicks. He testified that Quick had told him that he was going over to see Mrs. Daisy Ennist. John James Bush, a farmer at Brown's Station, testified that he drove by the spot where Quick lay about 6 o'clock Wednesday morning but did not stop as he had often seen men laying out in the grass sleeping in a jag acquired during the night. The body of Quick was also seen about seven o'clock Wednesday morning by James Ennist of Brown's Station, who drove by the spot but thought that Quick was sleeping and did not stop.

The evidence of these three men fixes the time of Quick's death as some time during Tuesday night.

It was also brought out that Quick was in the habit of seeing the Ennist woman who is thought to be "the woman in the case" although no evidence was produced before the coroner tending to show that she had ever been seen in company of the suspected Italian. It was also brought out that there had been some talk in the past that Quick had given evidence against the suspected Italian in some violation of the game law.

Testimony favorable to the suspected Italian was given by Joseph Paps, who has a grocery store in the vicinity and with whom Silvestre boarded. Paps claimed that he always locked up the house at 9 o'clock every evening and that his boarders had no keys. Edward Quirk, the nephew of the suspected Italian, had gone out after supper he had returned home before nine o'clock as Paps had seen him come in and had locked the door after they had all retired for the night.

Another witness called was James DeCleo of Atwood, David Morley of Atwood, William Lasher of Atwood, Charles Bouton of Tongore, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Quirk, the nephew of the dead man, Jacob Ennist and Mrs. Daisy Ennist. Drs. Henry B. Hibbard of Brown's Station and Dr. Henry Von Hoevenberg of this city testified to performing the autopsy.

At the close of the testimony Coroner Breithaupt reserved decision. The witnesses were examined by Assistant District Attorney Traver and the testimony was taken by Harold A. Styles, a public stenographer of this city.

Waterproof Matches.

Before you go camping, or away on a voyage, prepare some waterproof matches, and see that they are always at hand. In a small tin vessel melt some paraffin, and while it is still hot, dip the end of each match into this, and lay it out carefully until cool and dry. The coating of paraffin makes the match absolutely waterproof.—McCall's Magazine.

Too Wise a Bird.

"Can you tell me, sir," asked the adroit panhandler, "where an honest man can find hard work in return for a square meal?" "I could," replied the experienced and disillusioned citizen, "but I make it a rule not to answer questions wholly idle and academic." —Richmondville Times-Dispatch.

PAINTING UNVEILED SUNDAY EVENING

Sunday evening the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer was packed to the doors when the splendid painting by the young German artist, Carl Paul Jennewein, of Stuttgart, Germany, was unveiled. The painting is large, measuring 12x14 feet. The subject is "Christ Blessing Little Children." There are 14 life sized figures in the group. Christ is in the center of the group. The three apostles, Peter, James and John, are prominent in the picture. The other figures represent mothers bringing their children to the Saviour. It is a visual representation of the Scripture passage of St. Matthew, "Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The painting was presented to the Church of the Redeemer by Recorder Andrew Lang on behalf of the Lang family. Mr. Lang said that the picture illustrated the fact that we should do all in our power to teach the little children to pray and read the Bible. He said that the old custom of family prayer is almost extinct and the best place to teach the children the truth and the love of truth is the home.

In well chosen words Pastor Snyder, in behalf of the Church of the Redeemer, received the painting and consecrated it to its high purpose of teaching the truth. In his usual forceful manner Pastor Snyder gave a rapid sketch of the compilation and painting of the picture. He told how the artist traveled in Egypt and visited all the famous art galleries of Europe. How that the work of the picture was really done on three continents. He said further: Art is the handmaiden of religion. In all Lutheran countries where the influence of the Lutheran Church is a decisive factor, all the liberal and fine arts find their freest and fullest development. The Lutheran Church has always made use of especially vocal and instrumental music and the art of painting whether in beautiful art windows, paintings, mural decorations or works of art for altar vestments. The picture sets forth the central truth of Christianity, namely that of bringing little children to the Saviour. He said, "It is not out of style in the Lutheran Church for married people to have children. She believes and teaches that the lambs of the flock are objects of special care and solicitation. Parents and not hired nurses or tutors are to bring children to the Saviour. Religious experience and training must begin in childhood. It cannot be delayed without disastrous results to the child."

He complimented the congregation on having men who could appreciate such a work of art and who were willing to spend their money for such a purpose. In answer to the criticism that the money should be spent for more practical purposes his answer was the answer of Christ to Judas Iscariot: "The poor ye have always with you and whosoever ye will ye may do them good."

The sermon for the occasion was preached by the Rev. Ernst Muhlenberg, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Albany, N. Y., taking as his text, Isaiah 60, 1-3: "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee; the fir tree, the pine tree and the box together to beautify the place of my sanctuary and I will make the place of my feet glorious." He spoke in part as follows: "On the completion of creation, God saw that everything He had made was very good. This means that it was right, useful and beautiful. We can picture that goodness on the morning of creation. However, the coming of sin was to blight the whole of the creation and it was only through the redemption that the world was restored to its pristine glory. To the extent that man accepts this redemption does he partake of its blessings, but while many have rejoiced at the true and the good they have halted at the beautiful. The church is admired for its truth and goodness, but men have been shy of and neglected its beauty. They have exalted its spirit and activity but ignored its form. Now, while this may be of minor importance, it is yet worthy of adequate recognition. In the text we have the divine promise that the place of God's sanctuary will be beautiful and that He will make the place of his feet. His earthly dwelling place glorious. As it is the sphere of art to handle the beautiful, let it be our purpose through the suggestiveness of the text to consider the subject of art in the church. Art develops the aesthetic in life and worship. Man has a higher and a lower sphere of life, the tangible and the intangible, material and spiritual. The useful arts minister to the former, while the fine arts minister to the latter. Both in worship and organization art deals with the beauty of the Lord.

Art satisfies the demands of man's dual nature. As man is a religious as well as a physical being, and both united, art and religion have had a simultaneous development. The rock temples of India, the pillared structures of Greece, and the cathedrals of Christendom as well as the sculpture, painting, poetry and verse, attest this fact. Art acts under divine authorization and approval. The prohibition of the first commandment is not against religious creations of art but against their idolatrous use. The tabernacle and temple with their patterns and appointments together with the garments of the priests were specifically ordained of God. Surely then the church is not forbidden to employ the various forms of art that God may be worshipped in the "beauty of holiness." Luther left the Wartburg to thwart the iconoclasts and says: "I do not believe that art is to be overthrown by the gospel, as some hyper-spiritual people maintain, but I should like to see all art placed in the service of Him who made them."

The music by the large chorus choir was of exceptionally brilliant character. Herman LaTour sang a solo: "Suffer little children to come unto me." Jerome Williams played accompaniment on the violin. The chorus work was very satisfactory.

During the past year the choir has been maintained in a high state of excellence. Last night was an event.

Paint?

There are two good reasons for painting often-enough or even too often. One, to look prosperous; two, to be so.

Nothing does one more credit or gives one more credit than paint, supplemented of course by what goes with it; and paint costs nothing.

True, the first cost is $5 or $6 a gallon put on; but it saves more than that in the property; saves it from slow going down—not always slow—it drops with a jump when water gets in on wood and iron.

Dry wood and iron cost nothing, kept dry by paint when it needs it. Paint never goes down in the sense of being more profitable next year.

BRITISH ARMY COOKS AT WORK.

"An army moves on its stomach" and none of the nations at war has overlooked that fact. The photograph shows a squad of British army cooks preparing the evening meal for the men in the trenches—it comprises the only hot food the troops on the firing line get every day. The meal is ready to be served at sundown, when the food is taken to the second line of trenches in "cookwagons," and from there it is carried to the firing line through the connecting trenches. It is carried in pails and buckets and usually is served when it is served to the soldiers. No ordinary "beef and" and "beans and" are served to the Tommies. They get varied menus including many little delicacies which are sent to them by the various relief societies. There is usually a sweet and always tea or coffee. The tea is invariably brewed right in the trenches, the water being boiled on small fires.

FAREWELL SERMON BY DR. RUMMEL

The Very Rev. Dr. Joseph F. Rummel gave his farewell sermon at St. Peter's Church on Sunday morning and the services were very largely attended. The parishioners were moved to tears when Dr. Rummel spoke of his leaving Kingston and there was scarcely a dry eye in the house. The pastor after his sermon congratulated the congregation on its work during the eight years of his pastorate and told of the sacrifices made in order to build the new school hall, the improvements to the rectory, to the academy and the new work at the cemetery. In addition there was also much done on the heating apparatus of the church besides paying off $5,000 of the debt of the church. As the retiring rector spoke of his departure everyone was moved to tears, but he said that he was entitled to no credit for the vast amount of work that had been done but that the members of the church should have all the praise for all they had done for the glory of God. Dr. Rummel expects to leave for his new field of labor on Wednesday.

His successor, the Rev. Otto F. Strack, in January celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his ordination and the completion of ten years of service in the parish of St. Anthony of Padua, One Hundred and Sixty-sixth street, New York, to which church Dr. Rummel goes. In 1904 Father Strack was sent to care for the German-speaking people of the Bronx and after making a house to house canvass made many converts, reclaimed some who had drifted away from the church and soon had a congregation of four hundred. A small building was hired as a church and rectory but within six months Father Strack had built with his own hands an altar and shrine to St. Anthony. A short time later a site for the present church, rectory, sisters' house, school and other building was purchased and today it is one of the finest church properties in the greater city. The church has a seating capacity of six hundred at each of the six masses, there is a school room for from six to seven hundred pupils and in the parish building there are bowling alleys, billiard and pool rooms and a fine auditorium and stage for the use of the parish besides the separate building containing boiler room, sacristy and library. Considering that 75 per cent of the population in the parish is Hebrew it speaks volumes for the progress made by the parish and the energy of the pastor who is coming to Kingston. Father Strack was spiritual director of the New York County Federation of German Catholic Societies and has been a familiar figure at state and national conventions.

On Thursday evening the Men's Club will meet at the Parish House, when the Rev. Charles F. Kennedy, the rector, will deliver an address on "Three Hundred Years in the Episcopal Church."

SMOKELESS POWDER.

And One Reason Why Our Big Guns Are Made So Long.

Only 43 per cent of ordinary gunpowder is converted into gas when it explodes. The remaining 57 per cent is unconsumed residue, which we see in the form of smoke. With smokeless powder it is different. On ignition it is converted wholly into gas. A much greater volume of gas is produced, and the explosive effect is proportionately increased.

When the war with Spain broke out in 1898 the United States government did not have any smokeless powder. The Spaniards, on the other hand, had plenty of it and used it on both land and sea. Consequently the American besiegers at Santiago were unable to see the Spanish soldiers firing at them, whereas the enemy could see by the puffs of smoke just where to shoot. When Admiral Cervera's ships came out of the harbor and tried to escape, the vessels of the American squadron found it hard in the fight that followed to fire accurately because their view of the foe was obscured by the clouds of smoke from their own guns.

There are many kinds of smokeless gunpowder. One of the best known is the English cordite, which, when forced through holes in a perforated metal plate while in a plastic condition, takes the form of thick strings that look like brown rubber. The strings are cut up into short cylindrical pieces. You can safely hold a string of cordite in your hand and light one end of it; it will burn slowly with a bright flame.

A characteristic of smokeless powder is that they burn very slowly; on that account modern guns are very long, in order that all the powder of a charge may have time to be transformed into gas before the projectile driven by it leaves the muzzle of the weapon. The smokeless powder used by our army and navy is made by soaking nitro cotton in a mixture of ether and alcohol. It is thus converted into a plastic substance that may be molded or cut into any shape required. For small arms it is manufactured in a form resembling spaghetti—long strings that are chopped into little pieces and packed into the cartridges. For big guns it is made in long rods, which, after being perforated from end to end with a number of holes to insure quicker ignition, are cut into short lengths. That kind of powder, which might be called an explosive celluloid, is of a horny consistency. As in the case of other smokeless powders, the slowness with which it burns is owing mainly to its density.

The very cloth of the bags used to contain charges of gunpowder for the big guns has itself been made of smokeless powder—that is, woven threads of exactly the same substance. That is an invention of the Germans. The bag thus becomes part of the explosive charge and when the gun is fired it is wholly consumed.—Professor Charles S. Munroe in Youth's Companion.

MARGARET ANDREWS.

WHO WILL REIGN IN NEWPORT SINCE MISS ANDREWS IS TO WED.

New York, May 1.—Society is wondering who will be the reigning beauty of the younger set at Newport this summer since Miss Margaret Andrews is to be married to Morgan Belmont. She was acknowledged leader at the fashionable summer resort last season, and it seemed she would rule again this summer until Cupid stepped in and upset all plans.

Miss Roberta Willard and Miss Elizabeth Sands are two pretty girls in the "under twenty" set who are mentioned as possible contenders for the crown of popularity. Both are chums of Miss Andrews.

PLAYER WEARS GLASSES WHILE ON FIELD

Lee Meadows of St. Louis Cardinals.

Lee Meadows, the only player in baseball who wears glasses when he is in the meadow, is with the St. Louis Cardinals. Meadows is a pitcher and a good one, according to Manager Huggins. He may be seen any day in the practice and his spectacles are never missing.

Without them he can scarcely distinguish objects at a distance of 30 feet; with them he asks no favors. The glasses are of the spectacle brand. They differ from the average spectacles only in that the hook which fits about the ears is longer, thus anchoring them securely.

Advanced to Semi-Pro Player
Who Bet on Boston.

Renewed agitation against gambling at ball parks and on the results of games has brought out a story by a Chicago sporting celebrity, who quotes Frank Schulte as his authority. He says a young semi-professional player named Jake, who hung around the Boston Braves clubhouse, borrowed $50 from Joe Connolly very soon after July 4, when the Braves made their wonderful spurt.

As soon as he got the loan, Jake started betting on every game in which James and Rudolph pitched. He

The records of the 1914 major inter-league series have been compiled here. Including the ante-season and post-season series, 64 games were played, of which the National league teams won 32 and the American league clubs 29, while three tie games also figure in the records. NOTES of the DIAMOND

Detroit fans are raving about the work of their second baseman, "Pep" Young.

Bunny Brief has shown so far that he can hit a ball about as far as anyone in the game.

Norman ("Kind") Elberfeld, former Yankee, has signed up for another year with the Chattanooga club.

The veteran Pug Bennett has drawn his unconditional release from the Vancouver club of the Northwestern league.

Harry Niles, who was once one of the fleetest members of the St. Louis Browns, is now with Mike Kelly's St. Paul sluggers.

Pitcher Rufus Nelly and Catcher Harry Haight a battery considered good enough to stick with Fort Worth last year, have been released.

Tommy McMillan, for two years an outfielder with Charleston in the South Atlantic league, has quit the game to take up the practice of law.

Pitcher Lefty Liefeld, formerly with the Pittsburgh Pirates and last year with San Francisco, has signed with St. Paul of the American association.

Marty O'Toole is said to be showing something of his old self with the Columbus American association team and talking of getting back into the majors.

The Memphis club of the Southern league has insured its players for $75,000 under one of those baseball accident policies that are popular in the majors.

President Henry Berry of the San Francisco club has again pledged himself to have a new ball park ready for Seal fans before the opening of the 1915 season.

Bobby Stow won the second base job with Fort Worth, but Joe Kneaves being too valuable man to let go. Manager Nance decided to transfer him to third base, thus letting Ray Jansen out.

Joe Connolly of Boston Braves.

speedily ran the $50 into a fat sum. When the Braves landed the National league flag Jake had a good stake, but said nothing about his winnings.

It was something like a 100 to 1 shot that the Braves would not take four straight from the Athletics, but Jake grabbed all the alluring bets that were offered. He stood to lose every cent he had accumulated, but luck was with him all the way, and when the series ended he had $25,000 to his credit at the bank.

He felt deep gratitude to Connolly for making his fortune possible, and gave him a check for $10,000. Connolly did not know what to make of it, and consulted Stallings, who told him it was all right.

How Paper Cuts Steel.

A steel screw which for twenty years helped hold together the guide board of a wallpaper trimmer was worn completely in two merely by paper rubbing against it. During that time approximately 400,000 rolls of paper were trimmed by the machine. The screw was cut as smooth as could have been done by any instrument.

Japan's Fish Festival.

The festival of the Japanese boys is called the "fish festival." Every family with a boy sets up a tall flagstaff in the doorway of its house. At the summit of this flagstaff there is a gilt ball, and a long string of fish made of oiled paper or cloth flies out from the pole. The golden ball signifies a treasure which the fish are supposed to be trying to reach in vain.

AND BLIND BOY A MARVEL

George Relyea, a Highland, Ulster county, boy, a pupil of the New York State School for the Blind at Batavia, N. Y., astounded physicians and surgeons from all of the United States at the New York State Medical Society's annual meeting in Buffalo, last week, by demonstrating his possession of what experts term the "Sixth Sense."

Standing up before 1,500 doctors at the closing session of the meeting, George, who is 15 years old and was born blind was able to locate objects from four to fourteen feet distant without actually touching them. Noted physicians expressed great pleasure at being allowed to witness the unusual demonstration of the boy.

A target two feet square was hung on a standard on the lawn in front of the Sixty-fifth Regiment armory. The blind boy was taken about five rods away and told to find it. He started out on the lawn. After walking around with his head bent slightly forward for some time, he finally pointed directly at the standard at a distance of fourteen feet from it. The trial was repeated, but repetition seemed to dull George's appreciation of its nearness. He always found it but sometimes not until he was only four feet away from it.

Dr. F. Park Lewis of Buffalo, a noted oculist and president of the board of managers of the Batavia school, attributed the boy's power to an unusual development of the facial nerves, "nearly a sight by the skin," he said. He stated as his opinion that the air waves were compressed between the target and George's face and thus made known the presence of some material object nearby.

Professor C. A. Hamilton, superintendent of the school, on the other hand is of the opinion that George finds the objects through hearing. He has made many tests on him and others of his charges.

"I am somewhat borne out in my contention by the boys," Mr. Hamilton says, "who believe that is the way they do it. I know that when we put wet cotton in their ears, they are not nearly as successful in their attempts."

Experiments in developing this sixth sense possessed by George, and some other boys at the school in a lesser degree, are being continued under the direction of Superintendent Hamilton.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1165.—A Smart Up-to-Date Costume.
—Dress For Misses and Small Women.

The new basque lines, flaring tunic and becoming vest, are attractive style features of this model. Its youthful and becoming lines will assure its popularity. The fronts are cut low, and outline the vest, which is finished with a flare collar. The waist is lengthened over the back in basque style, and is finished with a broad belt, that may be trimmed with cash ends as illustrated. The tunic is joined to the waist in redingote style, and so forms a separate garment, that may well be worn over any skirt. The sleeve gives a choice of wrist or 3/4 length, each finished with a becoming cuff. This dress is good for serge, cashmere, or broad cloth, and may be effectively combined with satin, velvet, faille, poplin, plaid or checked suiting. The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 14, 16, 17 and 18 years. It requires 2 1/2 yards of 41 inch material for the skirt, and 3 1/2 yards for waist and tunic for a 14 years size.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Saturday afternoon two children about five years old, a daughter of William Menahan of No. 21 Shufeldt and a son of Mrs. Terpening, who is Mr. Menahan's daughter, got hold of a bottle of bichloride of mercury tablets and swallowed some of the poison. The prompt treatment was evidently successful as no ill effects have been observed.

SIMPSON SALARY DECISION RESERVED

The application of James V. Simpson for a peremptory writ of mandamus to compel the county treasurer to pay the balance of his salary as clerk of the Board of Elections was argued before Judge Hasbrouck at the court house on Saturday by Judge N. Frank O'Reilly on behalf of Mr. Simpson and by County Attorney John W. Eckert on behalf of County Treasurer Snyder.

The case involves the right of the Board of Elections to fix the salaries of their employees instead of the Board of Supervisors, and the further question whether the members of the Board of Elections are state officials performing functions, or whether they are county officials.

Frank W. Brooks, one of the present commissioners, and Dr. Harold Rockefeller, formerly a commissioner, were appointed by the Board of Supervisors on the recommendation of the chairman of the Republican and Democratic county committees, respectively. Their terms expired on December 31 last. John W. Eckert, who had been clerk of the Board of Elections, resigned that position in order to become County Attorney, and Mr. Simpson was appointed as his successor on February 1, 1914, at a salary of $60 a month. The Board of Supervisors last fall fixed the salary of the clerk of the Board of Elections at $500 a year, and up to February 1st of this year he was paid at the salary fixed by the Board of Elections at the time of his appointment. He claims that his appointment not having been made for any specified time, he holds office until his successor is appointed by the board, and that he should receive throughout his term the same salary at which he was appointed.

Mr. Simpson relies in his contention on the provision of the county law which prohibits boards of supervisors from increasing or decreasing salaries during the term of office of such officers, and that while the board of supervisors may fix the salaries of the election commissioners, the power to fix salaries of persons employed by the commissioners does not lie with the supervisors but that it lies exclusively with the commissioners. Furthermore, Mr. Simpson claims that the election commissioners are not county officers but are state officers performing local functions, and that their determination in fixing salaries cannot be upset by the board of supervisors.

County Attorney Eckert based his argument on the fact that the county law giving the board of supervisors exclusive power to fix salaries as long as such action is not in conflict with any other general or special law, and that the election commissioners are not state officials but are county officials only who are entirely within the appointive power and jurisdiction of the board of supervisors and therefore they do not come within the class of state officials, and their action is subject to revision by the board of supervisors in the matter of fixing salaries, which in this case is exclusively the function of the supervisors.

At the close of the argument, Judge Hasbrouck directed that briefs be submitted on these legal propositions, and reserved decision.

Lecture at Port Ewen.

Lofthouse will give his noted travelogue lecture on "Europe and the Great War," magnificently illustrated with the finest colored slides, showing the great armies in action, ruined cities, great war machines, Zeppelins in action, submarines, Krupp guns and all kinds of war death dealing instruments. This lecture is given under the auspices of the Epworth League Society. Ice cream will be on sale after the lecture.

Stars Need Uniforms.

The Kingston Stars, an aggregation of amateur ball players of the uptown district, are striving to keep the spirit of the game alive by staging clean games with some of the fastest amateur teams in this vicinity. The boys have met with admirable success so far but find themselves somewhat handicapped without uniforms, and they have decided to get out and hustle to raise the money to purchase their uniforms. Their first attempt will be in the form of a reception and dance to be held two weeks from today, and they will try and raise money by getting out a printed program for the dance.

John Roosa of St. Remy was in a runaway accident near the Lawrence cement mill at Eddyville on Sunday night. His horse became frightened at a passing automobile and bolting ran for some distance after which the rig ran into the ditch at the side of the road. Mr. Roosa was thrown out but escaped with a few bruises. The wagon was wrecked.

Y.M.C.A. OUTDOOR ATHLETIC MEET

Preparations are being made by Physical Director Godfrey of the Y. M. C. A. for the holding of a big outdoor athletic meet on Saturday, June 12. There will be fourteen events and any athlete of the association will be eligible to enter. Silver medals will be awarded the first place winners in each event and ribbons for the second and third place men. The jumps will be held in the rear of the association and the runs will be held on Pine Grove avenue. It is expected to make the meet one of the largest and best athletic meets ever held in this city.

The silver loving cup and ten medals to be presented to the winning team in the Junior Baseball League held under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. are now on exhibition in the show window of Diehl's sporting goods store on upper Broadway.

On Sunday the senior leaders of the Pyramid Club had their pictures "took" by Pennington.

BARNES TURNED MURPHY DOWN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Court House, Syracuse, May 3.—For the first time in the long trial, the Roosevelt forces today succeeded in showing communication between William Barnes and Charles F. Murphy about legislation in Albany.

But John M. Bowers caught a tangle in Walter Arndt, the witness, who swore that Barnes told him he turned Murphy down.

"Let Murphy pull his own chestnuts out of the fire," Arndt, formerly a newspaper correspondent at Albany, said that Barnes remarked.

Murphy, according to Arndt's version of an interview with Barnes in 1911 had asked Republican help to kill the direct primary bill.

It was Roosevelt's first evidence to prove his assertion, on which the libel suit is based, that Barnes and Murphy were in a political alliance. "In that one instance," explained a Roosevelt lawyer, "Barnes may have refused to aid Murphy, but we have established the fact that they were in communication."

The ghost of Senator Thomas C. Platt again today stalked through the libel suit when Edward T. Platt produced in answer to Bowers's subpoena, several thousand letters from Platt to Barnes and Roosevelt, and from Barnes and Roosevelt to Platt, covering the period from 1890 to 1909.

Platt insisted that all be read. Bowers said he wanted only Barnes' letters of 1898-1899. The court finally agreed to let a lawyer for each side meet Platt at recess and pick out the desired letters.

Musical Festival Rehearsals.

Conductor Norman Coke-Jephcott has called a rehearsal of the sopranos who will sing "The Creation," for this evening at 8 o'clock sharp, at the Y. M. C. A. building. On Wednesday evening the general rehearsal of all parts will be held at Symphony Hall. Every singer who can possibly do so should attend each rehearsal from now until the time of the festival, as such attendance will go far toward making the festival the artistic production that all wish it to be. There was a marked improvement in the attendance of the men at their special rehearsal on Friday evening, and excellent work was done, which was most gratifying.

Supreme Court Convenes.

The May term of supreme court convened this afternoon at the court house with a grand and trial jury in attendance. Judge Chester presided. There are one hundred and thirty-two cases on the calendar.

Modern War Methods.

Napoleon would not have broken down so soon if he had been able to use automobile, telephone and telegraph. Generals a few generations ago were young men, because they soon broke down under the hardships of campaigning. They had to live in the saddle and keep the field under eye in order to be able to direct the movements. Nowadays the general stays in his base quarters, where he follows operations on a map as reports come in by telephone and telegraph, occasionally by motorcycle, from various parts of the line. When he goes on a tour of inspection he rolls along in a motorcar at his ease.—British Medical Journal.

Chinese Beggar Chiefs.

At a Chinese wedding the "beggar chief" is always invited and brings a plate. He begs from all the guests, but in return keeps all other men-donors from the marriage feast. The beggar chief of a big Chinese city makes as much as $15,000 a year, and out of this he pays the common or street beggars to keep away from social gatherings.

Politeness of Tokyo Tradesmen.

It is nice to know in these days of lost reputations that oriental hospitality, at any rate, shows no sign of decadence. A correspondent has come across the following announcement in a tailor's shop in Tokyo: "Respectable ladies and gentlemen may come here to have fits."—London Spectator.

DAIRY and CREAMERY

THE COW PASTURE.

Grass Fields Should Be Cultivated and Well Fertilized.

Pastures should be cultivated and fertilized. No field needs good tillage any more than pasture, says Kimball's Dairy Farmer. To raise a good crop of pasture grasses pasture lands should be thoroughly disked every spring as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the land dry enough to be worked. To grow well roots of all grasses must have air. All grass land becomes soil bound. Air and nitrogen cannot reach the roots. Thorough disking in the spring is excellent for the pasture. It not only loosens the soil, but scatters the manure deposited by cows, thus enriching large areas. Otherwise such

The average life of a dairy cow is computed to be only seven years, yet Holstein cows have shown a productive capacity of over two and one-half times the normal length, says H. McAllister. Depreciation is one of the greatest losses suffered in dairying and, in the case of a $200 cow, it amounts to over $27 per year. Now, when a Holstein cow has approximately twice the length of profitable production as compared with other breeds it will readily be seen that this enormous expense of depreciation is but half for the cows of that breed. The longevity of the Holstein bull is also superior to most other breeds. The bull pictured is a pure bred Holstein.

deposits remain in one spot and kill out the grass underneath them. Disking and harrowing alone improve pastures wonderfully, as any one can demonstrate to himself by just disking and harrowing a small strip across any portion of any pasture. Further improvement will result from mixing together several varieties of grass seed and sowing a few pounds over each acre after disking, to be harrowed into the soil.

It is customary for dairymen to allow manure to accumulate in the barnyard all summer because they believe there is no place to spread it. A veritable breeding spot is thus provided for flies, and daily the manure becomes less valuable.

The place to put manure in the summer is on the pastures. Cows will refuse to eat grass where manure has just been applied, but this is not an objectionable fact, as the grass there will have a chance to make a new start. The next rain will cleanse the grass, beat the manure to the ground and dissolve the fertilizing elements from it and carry them into the soil. Then the grasses will make a new start and grow vigorously. Where the manure has been applied grass will be green and luxuriant. There the cows will graze. The milk flow will be increased, or at least it will be maintained. It is just as profitable to farm and fertilize pastures as other fields, and cash returns come more quickly.

COWS RESPOND TO CARE.

Irregularity in Feeding Tends to Lessen Production of Milk.

Professor T. L. Haacker of the Minnesota experiment station recently made the startling assertion to a group of dairy farmers in that state that they were taxing themselves annually $15,000,000 as a result of carelessness and inefficient feeding of their dairy herds, says the Kansas Farmer.

This statement was borne out by the representation of carefully gathered data secured by Professor Haacker in his long experience in handling dairy cattle. He related one instance of how a high producing dairy cow had been caused to fall off in butter fat production from five pounds to three pounds per day as a result of irregularities in her treatment. In this instance the cow was simply shown before an audience of 600 people for fifteen minutes in connection with a demonstration in judging dairy cattle.

The more highly organized the cow is the more surely will such variations from the ordinary treatment react and cause a falling off in production. Even the common milk cow of the farm will be affected by sudden changes in feed, changes in methods of handling or unnecessary exposure to cold or stormy weather. All such little variations from the treatment the cow is accustomed to receive will have a tendency to reduce production no matter how ordinary the cow may be.

This particular cow to which Professor Haacker referred was able to produce in food nutrients during one year products equal to the value of the carcasses of twenty-five yearling steers. This shows how serious such little irregularities in treatment might become as affecting the cow's revenue producing ability and especially if of frequent recurrence.

Two of a Kind.

Human nature does not change so very much from decade to decade, and the kind of man who always caught the biggest fish of the season ten years ago now has an automobile that will take any hill on high gear.

SUFFRAGE MEETING HELD.

Small Attendance, Possibly on Account of Rainy Day.

Owing to the threatening weather on Saturday afternoon but a small crowd attended the suffrage mass meeting on the Kingston Academy green. County Judge James Jenkins presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers. The first address of the afternoon was delivered by Mark DuBois, editor of the Poughkeepsie Courier who said that the great changes in industrial affairs had affected the women of the land and made the right of women to vote a necessity. He said that the men through their ballot do not rightly express the will of the womenfolk, and that women must have the actual vote as it will give them the power to remedy the many evils with which they are confronted. He closed his address with a plea that his hearers do all in their power to hasten the coming of equal suffrage.

Mrs. Nina Maitern of Poughkeepsie said that the women are asking the men for their support this fall that the suffrage amendment may be carried. She said that women suffrage was gaining ground all over the world. Equal suffrage she said has been endorsed by the national grange, the federation of women's clubs, the national women's trade union league and by various churches. She said that Wyoming was the first state to adopt equal suffrage and from there it spread to Colorado and other states until now women suffrage was in operation throughout practically the entire west. In closing she said that no political party dares to oppose equal suffrage openly.

The last speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. William G. Norrie of New York city, who talked over what should be done to make the campaign most effective in the city and county. An interesting discussion followed her talk in which it was decided to make an effort to get in touch with every voter in the city and county.

A Tribute.

There was that which was especially beautiful and fitting in the two close visits of the shining angel of death to the home of the late Michael J. Leonard, when his "crossing the bar" seemed but to lead the way for his beloved wife, Anna P. Leonard, daughter of the late Thomas Fitzgerald. With a tireless devotion this man and this woman had spent their long married life together, living entirely for each other and for their children, respected and honored by many friends whose privilege it was to come under the influence of their home life. When the wife and mother who had been longest an invalid, learned of the death of her beloved husband, she expressed the wish that she might join him, and so quickly was her prayer answered that it seemed that neither were forced to bear the pain of separation, but almost hand and hand, in the conscience of a peace and happiness gained through faithful service in this world, they fearlessly journeyed forth to meet their Heavenly Father.

Probation Officer's Report.

Probation Officer Theodore Weidmann has filed his report for the month of April with the state probation commission at Albany. It shows that he has had oversight of four men received from the court and holding over; two men and one woman received; two men and one woman have been passed, leaving four men under probation. Thirty dollars was paid by probationers. In the juvenile class four were continued under probation and six received. Three were passed and there are seven remaining. Two have completed their terms and one has absconded. The officer has made five home visits.

Ferry Street Pavement.

The small street roller is at work on Ferry street rolling the new brick pavement and the grouting is being placed. The street superintendent expects to have the work completed within three weeks. Concrete has been laid as far as the Central-Hudson Steamboat Company's office and brick is being laid as fast as it can be drawn on the job.

WOMAN CHAUFFEUR, IN ENGLAND.

WOMAN CHAUFFEUR ON ENGLISH MOTOR TRUCK.

Women are being employed to replace men who have enlisted in London, even as in Germany and France. The photograph shows a woman chauffeur, not of a pleasure vehicle, but of a motor truck. Her husband enlisted and she applied for his job. Being without other means of support, the concern hiring him, turned his post over to her at the same wages. This is true of hundreds of cases in England today. Outsiders applying for positions made vacant by enlistments are not getting the work. It is going to wives, sons and daughters of the men who have gone to the front.

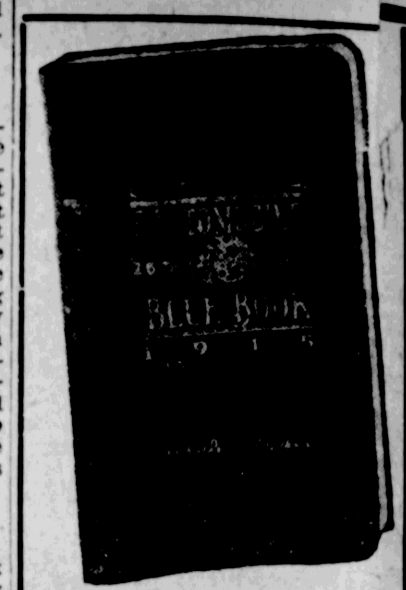

FRENCH DISINFECTING CLOTHES OF WOUNDED.

FRENCH SOLDIER DISINFECTING CLOTHES AND BEDDING OF WOUNDED.

The French have put in service a number of machines to disinfect the clothing and bedding of wounded soldiers. It is placed in a portable receptacle—some are revolved street sprinklers—and the fire beneath boils them thoroughly. The steam is kept imprisoned in the boiler with the clothing and bedding until all germs are destroyed. At the beginning of the war, clothing and bedding used by the wounded was incinerated. The injured became so numerous and the supplies so scarce that this policy had to be discontinued however.

HOW ARE YOUR MOLARS?

There are six upper and lower front teeth to cut the food. There are twenty back teeth to grind it. Twelve of these are called molars.

These molars are the last three teeth on each jaw. The word "molar" means "mill stone." They grind and grind the food like a mortar and pestle.

Asking "How are your molars?" is like asking "How is your health?" Yet the molars are often sadly neglected. If they are not soundly have them filled or crowned.

Probably some of your molars are decayed. If so, get them filled or crowned at once and they will last you through life.

Extractions 50c. Silver fillings. $1; Gold fillings from $2; Gold or Porcelain Crowns, $5; Bridge Work, per tooth, $5; Plates, $10 and $15. Open evenings to 9. Sundays 9 to 1.

VAN AKEN TRIAL
BEGINS MAY 17

The trial of Edwin Van Aken of Port Ewen, indicted for the murder of his wife, has been set down in the supreme court for Monday, May 17.

If This Is Your Birthday
MAY 3

On this date we have a person who is bestowed with many desirable qualities but who also has many faults to overcome. He must remember this:

That the man or woman who lacks self control is not reliable. Lacking self control, the first demand of business success is not met. Absolute self control inspires confidence and confidence is the foundation of business success. The lower nature is strongly developed and consequently we have a love of all external material things. The passions are intense; the appetites are the foundation of happiness (in belief) and the judgment is based on external appearances instead of moral worth.

This person should not enter marriage in early life as greater harmony and happiness will be secured if a mature judgment is allowed to decide. However, we find Taurus people or those of this birthdate marrying in haste and always repenting at leisure unless they marry a person of their own birthdate or one born in the early part of January.

The Want Ads will secure positions, will give service to the man or woman seeking positions and will sell or exchange household goods.

YALE QUARRY CASE
IN A NEW FORM

A taxpayer's action brought by Joseph T. Mulligan against the city of New York, the board of water supply and the comptroller, came before Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday on a motion for an injunction restraining the defendants from turning over to Jerome H. Buck any moneys that may be awarded to him for his Ashokan property known as parcel No. 7, and more familiarly known as the Yale quarry.

The object of the action was stated by Major Whiting, counsel for Mr. Mulligan, who said the plaintiff's contention was that the city of New York had exceeded its authority and confiscated Mr. Buck's property for water supply purposes while as a matter of fact it was not necessary either for the dam-site or the reservoir basin or for purposes of sanitation.

Major Whiting read the grounds on which the plaintiff's application was based. Among the grounds stated were that the city never filed any maps with the state water supply commission which disclosed that the property of Mr. Buck was to be included; that the property of Mr. Buck was 4,600 feet beyond the flow line specified in the statute and it was not necessary to acquire it; that the city had acquired it for the purpose of obtaining the quarry situated on it, which was not necessary for water supply purposes and that its acquisition was for a private and not a public use, because the quarry was acquired for the purpose of enabling the city to obtain stone for the construction of the dam, and that if the defendants were not restrained as asked for in the application, the public funds of the city would be wasted.

In support of his application, Major Whiting said it looked very much as if the taking line had been bent so as to take in some of the most attractive properties in the region. The taking line twisted and turned like a snake, and it was impossible to tell why unless the reason was that which he had stated; although nearly a mile from the flow line, the city had nevertheless appropriated it. On behalf of the city, said Major Whiting, it was claimed that the property was taken for purposes of sanitation, but he submitted an affidavit of one of the most eminent authorities on sanitation in the country who stated that it was not needed for sanitation purposes.

It had been said by the counsel for the city, said Major Whiting, that this was an action on the part of Mr. Buck to upset all the proceedings that had been had heretofore on the part of the city. Major Whiting said he was not going to affirm this, or could he say that it was not true, but if the owner of any property whose property was thus confiscated could procure a friendly taxpayer to bring action, he was entitled under the decisions to do so.

William McM. Speer, counsel for the city, in reply said that all these matters had been before Judge Hasbrouck, whose determination of them had been affirmed by the appellate division. He wished to file maps and an affidavit showing that the Buck property was not outside the taking line; if it was outside, how did the city acquire it? As the map which he submitted showed, there was property even beyond the Buck property which the city had acquired, which property had been acquired for purposes of sanitation. One of such properties so acquired was a cemetery which nobody would dispute should have been acquired for sanitation purposes. Even if the city had acquired the property for the purpose of securing stone from the quarry, which he did not admit, it was authorized to do so under section 5 of the water supply act, which the plaintiff clearly had overlooked or disregarded, and under decisions dating back for many years, a memorandum of which had been submitted to the appellate division and which also he desired to submit in the present proceeding.

Mr. Gillman, counsel for Mr. Buck, said that the property of his client contained 145 acres, fifteen of which it was true were under water, but the balance of the property was not needed at any time for sanitation purposes and not being needed either for water or sanitation purposes, the City had no right to attempt to acquire it under its power of eminent domain as conferred by the Water Supply Act, and not having a right to acquire, did not in fact acquire it, but was a trespasser. The first commissions had been appointed eight years ago, he said, and since then the claimant had wanted to try his claim but there was no tribunal before which it could be tried. As a practical question, said Mr. Gillman, and in these days practical men and practical questions were paramount, the city's contention was that the claimant was entitled to pay for his farm only as a farm instead of being paid for the valuable quarry which the City had sought to acquire for the benefit of the contractor by furnishing him with the stone for the construction of the dam. But whatever award should be made for the property could not be enforced because the property had not been taken legally.

In answer to Mr. Gillman, Mr. Speer said that Parcel No. 7 was within the taking line and the fact that part of it was flooded was sufficient answer to the claim that it was not necessary to be taken. The balance was within the marginal area acquired by the City for purposes of sanitation. This marginal area was not always one thousand feet in width. On account of the topography the width could not always be the same, but it varied according to topography and other necessities. The maps filed with the State Water Supply Commission were not intended to show separately each and every parcel to be acquired because that was an engineering detail to be attended to afterward; the map had shown the general section to be acquired, and the State Water Supply Commission had passed on that application, leaving the matter of detailed surveys to be worked out by the engineers later. Until such surveys were made it was manifestly impossible to notify every owner that it was intended to acquire his property, and in the present case it was impossible to notify Mr. Buck personally of the City's intention because he had not acquired title until many months after the hearing before the State Water Supply Commission.

Judge Hasbrouck directed that the papers be filed and allowed counsel to submit briefs on the matter. Decision was reserved.

London, May 3.—Mrs. Reginald Brooks, who was one of the beautiful Langhorne sisters of Virginia, and who recently obtained an interlocutory decree of divorce from her husband, Reginald Brooks, has inherited $300,000 from Captain Douglas-Pennant of the British army who was killed in action. Mrs. Brooks obtained her divorce because she claimed she and her husband could not agree as to what part of the world they should live in.

Steller's Sea Cow.

An inhabitant of the northern seas which has disappeared is Steller's sea cow. When Bering's expedition was caught in the ice near the strait which bears his name his crew lived mainly on the flesh of this huge and stupid Arctic animal. It was larger than an elephant, full grown specimens being as much as twenty-five feet long and weighing five or six tons apiece. It had no teeth at all, their place being taken by great horny plates. The very last of these horned monsters is said to have been killed by a Russian sealer in the summer of 1848.—New York Press.

Hard to Understand.

Arnold Daly says that once, when he was talking to Bernard Shaw, the latter admonished him, "If you wish to get on in the world never take anybody's advice."

"This," said Daly, "resolved itself into a paradox, for if I took Mr. Shaw's advice I was taking somebody's advice, and if I took somebody's advice then I should never get on, yet if I didn't take Mr. Shaw's advice I shouldn't get on, and—well, I came to the conclusion that Bernard Shaw was one of those people whom, as Lord Dunsyre says, 'no feller can understand.'"—Baltimore Sun.

Wind Velocity.

The majority of people are unable to determine the wind's velocity. When the smoke from a chimney moves in a straight, vertical column it means that a one to two miles an hour breeze is blowing. A three miles an hour wind will just stir the leaves on the trees. Twenty-five miles an hour will sway the trunks; at forty the small branches will break, and it takes a mile a minute gale to snap the trunks of big trees.—London Answers.

Not Guilty.

MENKE'S DAILY
SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, May 3.—Billy Sunday tells this story about Ed Williamson, one of the stars of the old Chicago team:

"Ed was along with the Chicago club when the two teams, piloted by Al Spalding, made the tour around the world. The team crossed from England to France in a steamer during one of the worst storms that ever visited the English Channel. Things got so bad that even the captain of the ship surrendered to despair. Ed grabbed two life preservers, strapped them around him and then offered up this prayer:

"Oh, Lord, I will lead a different life if you will spare this ship and our lives."

"The ship arrived safely in port and Ed went back to Chicago and started a saloon."

A mathematical fiend has concluded that Willie Hoppe, the billiard champion, has walked over 3,000 miles around a billiard table.

The mathematician discovered that Hoppe usually walks two miles around a table when playing a game of 500 points. Hoppe plays 50,000 points a year, so that means he walks 300 miles yearly. He has been champion something like nine years and did quite a bit of around the table walking before he became title holder. So his walking total goes over 3,000 miles.

Clinton Rogge, the new and promising twirler with the Pittsburgh Feds, lays claim to the distinction of being the only pitcher who struck out four men in one inning and lived to see every one of the four score a run.

It happened in a college game in Michigan. Rogge is a big chap with a world of speed. The varsity catcher was a 115 pound mite and couldn't hold Rogge, who struck out three men in a row, and every one went to first when the catcher failed to clutch the third strike. With the bases loaded, Rogge struck out the fourth batter and the man on third came home with the first rally, while the fanned batter raced to first in safety.

An error and a hit followed, and the three other strikeout victims who had gained bases through the inability of the catcher to hold Rogge, scooted home with the runs that won the game.

"Strategy" often succeeds where brawn fails" a prize fighter manager told us recently. Then he went on to explain:

"A number of years ago two brothers met in the final bout for the amateur championship of the club to which they belonged. The younger brother knew that he wasn't a match for the older, but he was game, and went into the ring with him.

"The younger one had a terrific punch that was good for a knockout if it landed, but the older brother's guard was so good that the younger one, who was on the defensive most of the time, couldn't bore through.

"Then the younger chap bethought himself of strategy. The brothers came out of their corners in the sixth round, and just as they squared off, the younger looked down at the older boy's knee, his face took on a look of astonishment, and he yelled:

"Say, for the love of Mike look at your knee!"

"The older brother fell for the ruse. He looked—and the younger shot a right uppercut to the jaw and won the championship."
